

Love:

Unconditional and sacrificial giving to another.

LOVE: Something we all want; in fact, something we all need. We are created to love; first God and then others. Jesus responded to the question of what is the greatest commandment; with, 'Love God and love others.' Everything else is based on these two basic premises. YET, do we truly love? Our spouse? Children? Friends and family? Those we are in conflict with? Too often the answer is, 'no, we don't.' Perhaps you protest that you do love your spouse; you provide for her or take care of him. But do you really love him or her? Do you give unconditionally and sacrificially? Do you seek his or her good in all things? Biblically, we are not to seek to get love, we are to seek to love; to give unconditionally and sacrificially.

What would happen if you stopped trying to get your needs met? If you stopped telling your spouse all the wrong things he or she does and sought to love him or her the way Christ loves you - dying to self and giving all without expectation of any return? Perhaps, for the first time, your spouse would see Christ at work in your life and thereby be drawn to you, rather than repulsed by you. Forget trying to change, correct, or fix your spouse! Love him or her unconditionally and sacrificially.

FORTIFIED MARRIAGES

Building Strong Marriages

Fortified Marriages Ministry: A Christian nonprofit ministry helping the church and individual couples build strong marriages.

www.fortifiedmarriages.com

info@fortifiedmarriages.com

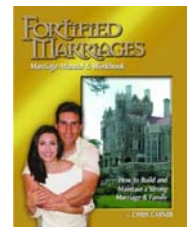

480-699-2515

Helpful Resources:

Fortified Marriages Resource page

Sacrificial Love, by Matthew White

50 Ways to Love Your Lover

The Fortified Marriages Workbook is a great way to strengthen your marriage. Order at our website and check out the many excellent resources available on our website